

POWER PROJECT BILL SUBMITTED TO SENATE UNIT

Measure Seeks to Carry Out President's Vast Tennessee Projects

MUSCLE SHOALS IS INCLUDED IN ISSUE

Federal Operation For Fertilizer, Power and Nitrate Planned

WASHINGTON, April 11—A bill to carry out President Roosevelt's vast Tennessee basin project, including government operation of Muscle Shoals for power, nitrate and fertilizer production, was introduced today by Senator Norris (R-Neb).

Submitted to Committee

Designed as the first step in a nationwide project of power production, flood control, reforestation, navigation and irrigation on the principal waterways, it was referred to the agricultural committee. It probably will not reach the floor for ten days.

No specified appropriation was provided in the bill, it merely authorizing "all necessary funds."

The measure created a "Tennessee valley authority," a corporation of three to be appointed by the president with approval of the senate, to supervise the project and authorizes a bond issue to defray cost of construction of plants and dams for power purposes. The bonds would be secured by the income from the sale of surplus power.

Amendment Expected

Norris said some difficulty had arisen over the proposed provision making all electric transmission lines common carriers to be regulated by the interstate commerce commission and until this was studied further, he would withhold it. He probably will offer it as an amendment on the floor.

The secretary of war would be authorized to construct or contract with private interests for construction of Cove Creek dam on the Clinch river in Tennessee primarily for flood control and navigation purposes.

A transmission line to Muscle Shoals and equipment for generation of at least 200,000 horsepower at the site also would be constructed.

Army engineers have estimated the total cost of Cove Creek dam at $34,000,000.

For this and all other construction, the board would be empowered to condemn all necessary lands, leases and rights of way to obtain a site for the dam and flowage rights for the reservoir of water above the dam.

It also would authorize the board to contract with states, railroads

SEVERE WIND IS SEEN BY WILEY AS CRASH CAUSE

Sudden Gust Sent Akron To Destruction, Survivor Testifies

Lightning Theory Discarded By Survivor of Ocean Tragedy

(By Associated Press)
LAKEHURST, N. J., April 11—Lieutenant Commander Herbert V. Wiley today told the naval board inquiring into the wreck of the Akron that he now believes the shock caused by "the severe gust of wind" a few seconds before the dirigible crashed was caused by her tall striking the water.

Wiley said he based his opinion on the fact that he had not felt any wind blow through the control car, that the "feel of the shock" was different from any he had ever experienced before, and that he could not be sure of the exact order in which events occurred just before he was washed out of the ship into the water.

Previously he had said he thought the Akron was 800 feet in the air when he felt the shock.

Pulled to Destruction

Returning to the stand as the naval inquiry entered its second day, Wiley said he believed a down current of air pulled the dirigible in the center of a terrific storm, down to her destruction.

As he resumed his story at the opening of the second day of the hearing, the grey-haired officer was asked what in his opinion caused the ship to descend so suddenly.

"It was undoubtedly down current of air," he replied.

Wiley, who previously had stated he did not believe the Akron was struck by lightning said she might have been struck without suffering any damage.

Efforts to No Avail

When he was asked whether any effort was made to take advantage of the Akron's adjustable propellers, which could be tilted downward to give additional lifting power to her motors, Wiley said he did not know.

Falling as rapidly as the ship was, he indicated, tilting of the propellers would perhaps have done more harm than good, since it took

While all kinds of clothing are needed, dresses and shoes are in special demand. Mrs. W. W. Andrews, president, stated today.

Persons wishing to make contributions may call Mrs. H. P. Litty, 1515-M.

Auxiliary members will meet Thursday at the American Legion home, East State st., to see.

Plan for World Economic Recovery Will Be Goal of Washington Conferences—France, Germany, Italy and Several Other Nations Invited to Attend.

AMB. DE LA BOULAYE

When Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain arrives here at the end of the month to participate in a series of conferences with President Roosevelt, the result of their deliberations will be less than a fool-proof plan for economic recovery to be expected to evolve from the discussions.

Norman Davis, President Roosevelt's Ambassador-at-Large, has been busy for several weeks sounding out the sentiments of other European nations towards the conference, and the result of his labors is that a new hope has been born in the war-torn continent.

France has professed herself willing to take part in the negotiations, and she will be represented, probably, by the newly-appointed Ambassador Andre de la Boulaye. It is also predicted that Italy and several other nations will take part. Germany will send an envoy.

The main subjects which will come up for discussion at the palaces will be debts and disarmament, as it is generally conceded that these two items are principal factors in any proposed plan for economic recovery. The feeling in Great Britain is that President Roosevelt

ALABAMA PLAYS SAFE

Reading the judge's instructions to the jury which has found Haywood Patterson, one of the Scottsboro case Negroes, guilty again on retrial of his case, the northerner who tries to understand Alabama justice gains evidence of the forces at work there in this unfortunate issue at law. He finds himself conscious of another viewpoint—almost another standard of ethics.

The judge in the case was as fair as a judge could be. A southerner himself, he did not spare his local popularity with expedient yielding to the spirit he knew was abroad. He understood perfectly why an Alabama jury would be likely to find against a Negro in a case involving criminal attack on white women. Nevertheless, it was his duty to point out principles and possible exceptions. He performed it with commendable honesty.

But the principles of law and the servants of the law have their foundation in the people, who speak through the jury. There probably were few realistic thinkers in the courtroom at Decatur during Patterson's second trial who believed that any Alabama jury could be assembled which would give a verdict contrary to that one given in the first trial. The Negro youths had been charged with assault on two white women. The charge itself was enough to condemn the defendants.

According to the opinion of a majority of the supreme court of the United States, that had been virtually the course justice had taken in the first trial, when the defendants were found guilty and sentenced to death without "right of counsel, with the accustomed incidents of consultation and opportunity of preparation for trial."

Alabama has its own convictions of justice in cases like the Scottsboro incident. Because it has chosen to play safe and uphold those convictions against an increasing protest, it has moved into a conspicuous position. It has made a celebrated cause out of what might have been an ordinary incident. The state and its citizens are to be pitied for the misfortune that publicity in the Scottsboro case has brought upon Alabama courts and Alabama juries. They handled the case in their own way, which they never have claimed was the method of ideal justice.

ALL READY TO GO

The French have a reputation for being canny. It is said without much dispute that they are the foremost realists of Europe. They know what they want and they go directly after it. Usually they get it.

It is with more than passing interest, therefore, that Americans hear of a French campaign of propaganda to be launched in this country. The object of the campaign is to excite more sympathy and greater admiration for France. With amazing frankness, the French bureaucrats who are to put it over have told all their plans and ambitions.

Through powerful machinery of publicity, parts of whose proposed structure must amuse certain gentlemen who turn a fishy eye on all publicity, they promise to give Americans so many nice things about France to read that hard feelings will wither and blow away.

Men and women will write, speak and paint for the sole purpose of selling the French people and their products to Americans.

Unfortunately, now that the whole thing is out of the bag, Americans will be waiting with tongue-in-cheek for the publicity deluge to start. They will be cautious, as people always are when threatened with being made subjects of a campaign. They will resent what seems to be a French belief that they are stupid enough to fall for artificial bait.

The fact is, Americans are perfectly willing to be friendly with the French. Aside from a little hard feeling over a matter of money that went off badly last December, friendship never has been anything but strong and even enthusiastic, sometimes. Incidentally, the effort that is to be made to offset the shock of realizing that France was willing to run out on a debt owed to the United States will cost about $1,000,000. The results would get better results.

What Others Say

TWO JUDGES

Forbidden by constitutional limitations to reduce federal judges' salaries by law, Congress last year broadly hinted that these jurists might do a bit of economy legislation on their own and take voluntary cuts in pay.

Only two judges took the hint. The rest of the 40 circuit judges continue to draw their $12,500 and the 151 district judges their $10,000 stipend. Possibly the federal judiciary agrees with labor that salary slashes are deflationary and unusual. Possibly it has other thoughts.

The rest of the country will wonder why underpaid government clerks must take severe cuts in the name of economy while life-tenure federal judges need suffer no effects from the governmental economy drive.

It is too bad the treasury withholds the names of the two judges who reduced their own salaries. A monument should be erected to the unknowns.—Columbus Citizen.

CHICAGO, April 11—This is the story of Vincent McCourt. For 17 years he was a clerk for the board of education. The board got so far behind in paying salaries that he asked for charity, but it was denied because he was employed. Temptation came. He took about $1,000 in tax anticipation warrants and checks to feed his family of eight children, he said.

A judge listened to the story, then sentenced him to serve 10 months in jail for conspiracy.

The position of the school board employee is "tragic" the court said, but if all of them did what McCourt did, the judge added, "There would not be enough policemen in Chicago to hold them in check."

NEW YORK, April 11.—No celebrity seems so little known to his native city as Vincent Astor. His recent yachting with President Roosevelt was the first time he has been first-paged for years. Seldom in fashionable restaurants or night clubs, he attends about two theatrical openings a season.

Few millionaires' sons escape an exuberant fling along Broadway, but Astor is one who has. In recent years he has spent much time cruising in European waters. His favorite restaurant in Paris is shadowy and sedate Hoyot's. In New York he often "rides the pony" at the Grand Central oyster bar.

Tall and straight, he has the leathery tan of the yachtsman. Frequent reports of marital trouble between him and his boyhood sweetheart, Helen Huntington, are tattered. Their paths do not always run in the same direction, but those who know say there is a deep, impersonal affection between them.

Astor is 41 and rarely visits many clubs of which he is a member. He has wide knowledge of his vast real estate, but leaves the management largely to others. Biography is his favorite reading. He has somber moods, but is usually genial, although never talkative.

So I slot a dime for his fare and in turn took my order for a set of books before we reached Washington Square. I've got to quit waving to people.

go on, mal-nutrition and underweight are liable to follow.

Where there are adenoids or dis-eased tonsils, poisons may be carried by the blood stream to all parts of the body. If one of these conditions exists, it should be attended to at the earliest possible moment. If the child seems to be underweight, it may be that the slight operation needed will bring him back to normal health.

It may be that your child is not getting the proper nourishment. Every child should have at least a quart of milk every day. This may be taken as a drink, or in the cooked food and with cereals. Milk should be the foundation of every child's diet, and nothing but the very best milk is good enough for your child.

Plenty of Sleep

A growing child should have fresh fruits and vegetables. These furnish those wonderful vitamins, minerals and other substances which promote growth and energy.

Every mother has a real task before her in looking after her growing children. She must be careful about their food and how they eat it, their sleep, their every day fresh air and sunshine, and goodness knows how many other things.

The hours of eating, rest and sleep should be on schedule time for the growing child, and kept up through adolescence. They may vary somewhat with the age of the child, but regularity should always be the rule.

A child who is underweight must not be scolded. He should be encouraged gently, but firmly in the right living habits. When his day has been reorganized and he has had time to build up his strength and ambition, it will be worth all the time and worry you have put into it to see him well and strong again. Then when good habits have been formed, they should be kept up diligently during all the years of growth.

Answers to Health Queries

Constant Reader. Q.—What causes an offensive breath? 2. How much should a girl of 20, 5 feet 2 1/2 inches tall weigh?

A—This may be due to many causes, such as indigestion, diseased tonsils, decayed teeth, catarrh or constipation. Try to locate the underlying cause and remove if possible. 2. She should weigh about 119 pounds. This is about the average weight for one of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons.

A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

The Underweight Child

Health comes first of all in importance. The child who has a good start in life has an immense advantage over one who is handicapped by the effects of ill health.

I wish every child could be well nourished and possessed of good health. Many children go about listless, behind in their school work and burdened more than they should be by long hours of study and home work. How about your child? Does he seem tired, pale and irritable?

There is a real reason back of all this. The question of underweight centers about one of a good many contributing factors. Perhaps the first thing to consider is whether the child has any physical defect. It is well to have your doctor look him over and give his opinion on the subject.

Defective Eyesight a Factor

Sometimes a child with defective eyesight or poor hearing will develop a serious physical condition. Very often a nervous, high-strung child who is behind in his school work will be found to have quite serious eye strain. If permitted to

"THE CHALLENGE OF LOVE"

by WARWICK DEEPING

SYNOPSIS

Young Dr. John Wolfe arrives at the quaint town of little Navestock to become Dr. Montague Threadgold's assistant. Though shabby of dress, the young doctor's bearing commands respect. Dr. Threadgold is very affable but his wife, who judges from outward appearances, considers Wolfe a "raw gawk of a man" and treats him coolly. Sir George Griggs arrives with a dislocated shoulder. He is infuriated over Dr. Threadgold's clumsy treatment and turns to young Wolfe who skillfully sets the shoulder. Later Dr. Threadgold tells his wife that Wolfe has some ability but is a little forward. Dr. Threadgold attends the prosperous patients and assigns his assistant to the poor section of town. The young physician realizes the pitiable plight of these people in hands of a bungling doctor. Wolfe reprimands a boy on horseback who mischievously annoys a group of children and spatters a girl with mud. The doctor asks Sam, Dr. Threadgold's butler, why the younger is.

CHAPTER EIGHT

"That was young Master Brandon, of Pardons, sir. Mrs. Brandon's only son."

"Big people are they?"

"Tax takers."

"Own much of the town?"

"About half, sir, so I've heard."

Mr. Brandon seems to do as he pleases."

"Lor', sir who's to stop him? I've seen him ride his pony half into Mr. Hubbard's shop and swear like a lord at the old gentleman."

Wolfe looked amused.

"Do lords swear so very furiously Sam?"

"Sure, I don't know, sir. I don't know as I ever seen one."

"And there is no Mr. Brandon?"

"Father—you mean, sir?"

"Yes."

"No, sir. He died a sort of idiot quite a long while ago."

They had made their way up a back street to Paradise Place, a row of brick and timber cottages, each with a small square of garden spread like a mat before it. How the place had earned its name it would be difficult to say, unless the person who had christened it had been blessed with a sardonic sense of humour. The bits of gardens were mere patches of dirt, and the casement windows, many of them stuffed with rags, looked out on the high brick wall of Miller Hangel's great wagon-shed. A pump stood in an enclosure half-way up the place. People called it the "Paradise Pump," though how many cesspools leaked into the well below no one troubled to consider.

Wolfe spent an hour in Paradise Place and ended it with an inspection of the Paradise Pump. He decided that he would have a sample of that water, and examine it. An analysis might explain sundry phenomena that he had observed in the neighbouring cottages.

Walking homewards towards Mulberry Green he cast a critical eye over the fat boy and confessed to himself that the lad looked particularly healthy.

You take plenty of physic, Sam."

"Me sir?"

"Yes."

"Ain't had a drop of physic since the measles five years ago."

"Whereabout do you live?"

"Up Peachy Hill, sir."

"You're a rogue, Sam! Many people get ill, living near the peaches?"

"Not much illness our way, sir. It's mostly down along the river."

"And who's your landlord?"

"Mr. Crabbe."

"And who is Mr. Crabbe?"

"Why, Mr. Josiah Crabbe, sir."

Sam was out of breath, since Wolfe had been striding at full speed up Market Hill. He gasped out information between heavings of the chest.

Does Mr. Crabbe own much property?"

"All about Peachy Hill, sir."

"And the places we have been to this morning?"

"Part, Brandon's sir; part, Mr. Turrell, the brewer's, so far as I know."

"I expected as much. You are getting pumped, Sam, in more ways than one. What's that striking? One o'clock? I shall be late for dinner."

But Wolfe did not hurry himself. He appeared to be thinking hard all the rest of the way to Mulberry Green, and Sam, who was a lethargic lad, was content to wonder whether the cook at Prospect House had made a jam-roll for dinner.

When a man marries Sincerity he marries a strong-willed young woman whose sternness may drive him into many complicated situations.

John Wolfe was one of those definitely sincere people who cannot stand by and see a fellow man lie down to doze on a muck heap. It has been said that we create our own problems in life, and that the more sensitive we are the more we react to the imagined wrongs of others. Nor had John Wolfe been ten days in Navestock before he was faced with a problem that lay in the very path of his career. Most men who go out into the world of action meet this first crisis that rises like a bullying giant to try their strength. As a rule, all the advantages are on the giant's side. He has the big club, the furious arrogance of a great beast, and—above all—a friendly grin for those who prefer to surrender rather than fight. Life is much smoother for those who learn to adopt a habit of genial cynicism. Such men learn to shut one eye, to bend their heads, and to squeeze through narrow places.

Often after the day's work, Wolfe would sit on the edge of his bed such eccentricities. They thought and sate hard at the pink crimped paper in the Georgian grate. Some had refixed the text in its proper position over his bed, and Wolfe had smiled when he had first noticed the readjustment. "My God, Thou seest me." And it is an echo of this cry that sounds in the hearts of the most unorthodox of men whose aim is to grasp life honestly and to tolerate no excuses. We struggle on towards something even in the teeth of our desires. We may not argue it out, or even reason the question. The choice is there. We take the rougher road, grumbling perhaps, calling ourselves fools but taking it none the less. Always in the best man there is the sense of uplift against odds that driving instinct that forces him forward towards something better. He is like a tired man digging a garden plot. Another word? Why not bury it, leave it, pull it up in the spring? But the instinct of thoroughness is too strong for him. He stoops and pulls up the weed, swearing perhaps that it shall be the last.

Wolfe went about his work with a quiet thoroughness that soon began to accumulate facts. South London was not one of the cleanest corners of the earth, but the things that John Wolfe found in Navestock were more astonishing and far more scandalous. As for the people, they appeared surprised that he troubled to stay more than five minutes in each cottage, and the more servile among them tried to flatter him by contrasting his keenness with the hustling methods of his predecessors. Wolfe felt a peculiar interest in the men who had preceded him. He wondered how much they had troubled to discover; whether they had been true men or mere lick-spitties running a daily round. From what he heard, Wolfe judged that Dr. Threadgold's former assistants had been very easy-going young men, rushing through the day's work in order to play billiards at the "White Hart" or run after a petticoat. They had not dug under the surface of things to vex themselves with problems.

Wolfe bought some sheets of cartridge paper at Mr. Galpin's shop in Queen Street, and began to draw maps of Navestock, working at night by candlelight in his bedroom with his portmanteau and the top of a box for a table. He kept a notebook, and jotted down his observations day by day, pushing his investigations into all manner of queer corners, hunting odours to their hairs, peering down surface wells, and scrutinizing ditches. He was unostentatious in his methods, and the people of the lanes and river alleys were too ignorant to trouble their heads about

London-Moscow Break Imminent Over Jailed British Engineers

Diplomatic Relations Strained as British Envoy and Foreign Secretary Assail Soviet's Treatment of Britons Accused of Sabotage and Espionage.

SIR JOHN SIMON and MICHAEL I. KALININ

Following a scathing indictment of Soviet justice by Sir John Simon, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and the passage of a bill authorizing an embargo on Russian products by the House of Commons, observers in the British capital believe that a severance of diplomatic relations between London and Moscow is imminent. The international storm resulted from the arrest of a number of British engineers, employed by a British firm installing power plants in Russia, on charges of sabotage and espionage. The men, L. C. Thornton, John Cushing, A. W. Gregory, Charles Nordwall, W. H. MacDonald and Alan Monkhouse, director of the British electrical firm, were arrested by the OGPU (secret police) and, according to Sir Esmond Ovey, British Ambassador to Moscow, subjected to an intensified form of "third degree." Monkhouse, said Sir Esmond, was forced to sign a "confession"—even before he knew the nature of the charges against him. The British Ambassador's representations to Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, brought the reply that the Soviet intended to prosecute the Britishers to the limit. This was after Britain had threatened an embargo and severance of diplomatic relations. With the exception of MacDonald, all the accused were released on bail to come for trial in the near future. But the fear prevails in England that the men will not be given a fair hearing, as cases are on record where the OGPU conducted its own trials, denying the accused legal representation. The penalty, if the accused men are convicted, is death. And as feeling over the affair is running very high in Britain, the conviction of the engineers might have disastrous consequences to the whole of Europe.

RETURN OF BEER AIDS BUSINESS

Numerous Bright Spots Appear In Ohio Industries

(By Associated Press)

Numerous bright spots appeared on Ohio employment horizon today, some directly due to the new beer, and some of a more or less temporary nature.

An order for 75,000 radio cabinets caused officials of the Hopple Manufacturing company plant at Tiffin, which has been closed for more than a year, to announce full operations were expected to start within a month. The plant formerly employed about 100 men.

The industrial corporation of Stark county (Canton) announced that for the first time since 1929 employment figures for the current week were higher than during the corresponding week of the year before. Its report showed 7,699 men at work compared with 7,651 in the similar week of 1932 among 68 leading Canton industries. The weekly employment gain was the third in as many weeks.

Add More Men

The Willys-Overland plant at Toledo announced employment had increased from 1,000 men a week ago to 1,800, and a $38,000 payroll would be met today. Receivers of the company were ordered by federal court to pay an additional 20 per cent to 7,500 men for work they did before Feb. 15. The payment would aggregate $60,000.

Six of the eight hot mills of the Reeves Manufacturing Co. at New Philadelphia will be operated this week and next, officials said, and 300 men will be employed.

At Dover, the Greer Steel Co. announced the 140 men at work this week were only 30 men less than a normal force as compared with the 20 per cent basis upon which the company has operated for three weeks.

Commitments amounting to 24,549 tons of steel for 1933 were announced by the Erie Railroad at Cleveland.

Beer Helps Out

Employment reports traceable directly to beer included those from Cleveland, Akron, Cincinnati and Sandusky.

Dr. Threadgold might have guessed the aim of Wolfe's investigations. He imagined that he had reduced this young man to a proper sense of his position, for Wolfe had seemed quiet and tactful and ready to accept any quantity of work. Wolfe's thoroughness made him cautious. He was not one who shouted upon impulse, but observed things and recited them before he uttered a word. He had said nothing to Threadgold of the many carelessnesses he had discovered, but had quietly altered the treatment without making any remark. Dr. Montague had in some measure foiled the incident of Sir George Griggs and the dislocated shoulder. He had always had to deal with cheerfully compliant young men who had had the instincts of boys and who had done just as little as was required of them, and then run off to play. Threadgold told his wife that Wolfe was giving every satisfaction, and since Wolfe did not smoke in the house, kept out of the drawing-room, and did not show such a gluttonous hunger as he had shown on the first night, Mrs. Threadgold was inclined to consider him a very passable person.

Offices of the Sandusky plant of the Cleveland & Sandusky Brewing Co. said they would employ 125 workers at once.

Although figures were unavailable, reports from Akron said a number of men were employed at altering buildings because of the new beer. Truck owners there said they were busier than they had been for years.

At Cincinnati, Joseph Oberfell, secretary of the United Brewery Workers of America, estimated 1,000 persons had found full time work in the producing of beer and allied trades. Robert B. Hesketh, secretary of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance, said 400 members of the organization had found work dispensing the beverage.

At Cleveland, the Plain Dealer said a survey showed five bottlers and distributors of beer had added 123 employees and a sixth had given full time work to 120 men who formerly worked only part time. It is said more than a score of restaurants and hotels reported the addition of nearly 150 employees on full time, the advancement of 24 part-time workers to full time, and the employment of five new part-time workers.

The Perpetual Savings & Loan Co. has filed foreclosure proceedings in common pleas court against William J. Orock and 13 other defendants, seeking judgment for $1,238.32 claimed owing on a loan of $1,600, secured by mortgage deed covering lot 1090 Janesville addition, East Liverpool.

In the case of Harry Bookwalter and George V. Frye against J. W. Hively, the issues have been submitted to the court, and a finding and decree has been entered in favor of the plaintiff. The decree orders the defendant to specifically perform a contract by paying the plaintiffs $215 with interest as prayed for in the petition, and also the costs. An appeal bond has been fixed at $500.

BEER HAS RETURNED

REPEAL PREDICTED

By Arthur Brisbane
(Copyright, 1933 by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

BEER has come all the way back. It will be sold in the House in Washington. It is sold openly, on Sundays, no need to seek for a "side door," as in old New York city saloon days.

Men that should know predict, even offer to bet that the necessary 36 states will vote to repeal prohibition absolutely and thus take it out of the constitution. Anything can happen when the people become angry or poor, and especially when both things happen at once.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT's program counts that day lost whose low descending sun views from his hand no employment job begun.

The latest big Roosevelt enterprise, just launched, will develop the great Tennessee basin and put to work Muscle Shoals' power, a plant built with the people's money.

For years Senator Norris of Nebraska, Republican, has demanded that power from the Muscle Shoals plant be sold at a fair price to provide a "yardstick" for charges by other companies. That Republican idea which he swings in main against "sound" Republican party conservatism is to be carried out by a Democratic President.

The "yardstick" will not suit all electric companies.

AIRPLANES simplify the troubles of nations that rule "inferior peoples."

In French Somaliland, rebellious Abyssinian tribes threaten trouble.

There is no need now to march French soldiers in red pantaloons, making excellent targets, across desert sands.

France sends an airplane carrier loaded with airplanes, each airplane loaded with bombs and machine guns. Shortly after they view and hear those airplanes, the rebellious Abyssinians will feel less rebellious and will be running in many directions, while the Frenchmen, smiling down on them, will probably not have a scratch. A new kind of war has come, and sooner or later, this country will learn that it exists. Let us hope it will be sooner, before we play the part of "rebellious Abyssinians."

ITALY reports an airplane speed of 431 miles per hour. Mussolini's government may be poor in cash, compared to some others, but it isn't poor in common sense and spends courageously where national safety is concerned.

How pitiful our American air marks seem compared with this Italian speed, that would go around the world at the equator in 60 hours. In Italy the government promotes aviation and supplies the necessary money making tests that will mean air supremacy.

England also has the aviation intelligence, lacking here, and has not hesitated to spend $1,000,000 and more preparing for one single race for the "Schneider cup".

PROF. EINSTEIN has accepted an appointment in the University of Madrid. Great scientist and a glory to the German republic, Prof. Einstein is driven out merely because he is of the Jewish race. They actually searched his house for deadly weapons. As well search the nest of a dove.

Einstein is welcomed and honored in Spain, a country that has gone through centuries of commercial and industrial decline and sterility because it formerly drove out the Jews, as Germany is doing now. Spain, apparently, has learned something. Germany will learn later.

BARON VON PAPEL, representing Hitler's government, formerly a member of the "Center" or Catholic party in Germany and himself a Catholic, is in Rome discussing with the Vatican authorities a friendly understanding between Hitler's government and the Vatican.

The pope may receive Von Papen today. Meanwhile he is discussing details with the papal secretary of state.

The Vatican receives Von Papen and his suggestions calmly, for it has met other dictators seeking its approval since, and before Napoleon who restored the rights of the church for his own protection, and Mussolini, who restored the pope's temporal power.

IT WAS suggested here that if instead of dodging in various directions to escape the electric and windstorm, the Akron had put straight out to sea at top speed, it might have been saved.

It develops now that the course of the ship was changed two or three times in 45 minutes after lightning was seen 30 miles to the south. Finally an order, given by mistake, or misinterpreted, sent the ship into the peak of the storm.

Columbiana Truck Concern Pays Fine

LISBON, April 11.—The B. & N. Transfer Co., of Columbiana, an Ohio corporation operating 11 trucks paid a fine of $25 and costs in the court of Mayor G. Cecil Rauch here for operating a truck carrying a Pennsylvania truck license and without having an Ohio license as provided by Sec. 12618-3 of the General Code. Patrolman Charles Patterson arrested C. F. Leonhardt, driver of the truck.

It has been disclosed that Pennsylvania does not permit an Ohio truck to make more than 15 trucks into that state without procuring a license, while the Ohio code provides that an Ohio corporation must carry Ohio plates on its motor equipment.

(By International News Service) PARIS, April 11—Former Premier Edouard Herriot will sail for the United States next Monday, two days earlier than planned, in order to be able to join Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in the conversations on world problems with President Roosevelt.

The steamship Ile de France, which Herriot will take, was being redecorated but its departure was advanced two days at the government's request.

The man who has been thrice premier of France and still is the dominant figure in his party despite his overthrow on the debt issue, hopes the Washington invitation to France will create sentiment in the chamber of deputies for payment of the defaulted installment.

He feels no embarrassment in going to America without a pledge to make the overdue payment because the debts are not officially on the program for the talks and United States government leaders have said the debt question has become small in comparison with the larger problem of world recovery.

Heriot is consulting government leaders today including Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour.

Major Teams Weakened For Openers; Several Stars Injured

THE DAY IN SPORTS

YANKS BIG FAVORITES
CLEVELAND CONFIDENT AND SO ARE THE OTHERS

PICK THE New York Yankees to win the American league pennant again this year and you'll have a pack of seven other team managers on your ears, howling at you unmercifully and demanding recognition for their own revamped clubs.

No less than four of the American teams, New York, Cleveland, Washington and Philadelphia have, to hear their managers speak, the pennant in the bag. The race, according to them, might just as well not be run.

Babe Ruth, the famous slugger who you may have heard from occasionally, says the Yanks should win by at least 18 games. William Harridge, president of the league, thinks the circuit is better balanced than it was last year, that the fight should be close but that Joe McCarthy's lads will triumph.

Carrie Griffith, owner of the Washington Senators, and his youthful short stop and manager, Joe Cronin, believe the Senators will finish ahead of the New Yorkers. And the veteran Connie Mack, embarking upon the golden anniversary of his career in baseball, says he has a young team which will ride through to victory. Roger Peckinpaugh of Cleveland is just as cocksure as any of them.

Revise 3-Second Rule

A rule of interest to spectators makes it mandatory for officials to handle the ball on out-of-bound plays. By causing the ball to be placed on the floor, the official eliminates a common complaint of both players and spectators—the sometimes unfair advantage given by opportunity for a quick-action return.

Other Changes

Another change of general interest allows a player to enter the game twice instead of once. The other revisions are of less importance. They clear up points which have been in doubt.

Fortunately, basketball, from the spectators' standpoint, will not be affected one way or the other. The intent of the rules is, of course, to speed up the game, but most spectators have found it satisfactory in the past and they will continue to like it. Probably the most valuable change that has been made since the game was reduced to five-man teams is the anti-stalling rule which prevents freezing the ball in defensive territory. Some day soon the rules-makers may find themselves with nothing more to do.

Here are the rule changes:

(1) The 10-second rule will be applied to all courts, regardless of size. On courts 75 feet or more in length the center line is mandatory. On courts of less than 75 feet two lines may be used, so that the offensive half of the court is 40 feet.

Where this 40-foot line encroaches within the foul line on exceptionally small courts, it was decided, the prolongation of the foul line will mark the 10-second line.

(2) Only the first player to receive the ball in the offensive zone may pass the ball back over the line at third and second, respectively.

Philadelphia, stopped in its quest for a fourth straight championship, parted with three fine players in Al Simmons, Mule Haas and Jimmy Dykes but Mack says his crop of youngsters will more than replace the veteran trio. The latter have been sent to Chicago to perform with the White Sox.

The Pale Hose, incidentally, figure to be in the fight from start to finish.

RETURNING TO Cornelius McGillicuddy's team, the A's have Jimmy Foxx, Mickey Cochrane, Lefty Bob Grove, George Earnshaw, Rube Walberg, Roy Mahaffey, Tony Freitas and others to give the Philadelphia fans high hopes. It is indeed a team with possibilities but it is not the team which is figured to give the Yanks their hardest fight.

The aggregation that should do this is Washington. The Senators got Goose Goslin back from St. Louis. Fred Schulte is also in the Senator fold while an additional acquisition is Earl Whitehill, late of Detroit, a star southpaw. They have a hard-hitting outfield, Goslin, Manush and Schulte and the infield too is strong, both in fielding and in offensive power.

The pitching staff includes Alvin Crowder, Stewart, Whitehill, Monte Weaver, Al Thomas, Bill McKeec and others. Followers of the club mourn the absence of Ray Spencer, crack catcher, who was replaced by Luke Sewell, Cleveland Indian receiver who, however, is far inferior in all-around abilities to his predecessor.

NOW FOR THE Yankee rival, the Cleveland Indians, the club which Salem fans will be watching all season.

Wesley Ferrell, Clint Brown, Willis Hudlin, Mel Harder and Oral Hildebrand are the pitchers; Spence, Frank Pytlak and Ray Myatt are the catchers; Joe Vosmik, Earl Averill, Dick Porter, outfielders; Eddie Morgan, Bill Knickerbocker, Bill Cassell and Bill Kamm the infielders.

It's another fine aggregation, the best to represent the tribe in a decade. It should finish in the first division with ease and may fool all by being one of the principals in the championship fight.

EL PASO, Tex.—An American cameraman found Juarez, Mexico, police obliging when he asked to get into jail to take pictures. The officers put him behind the bars for 15 days—without his camera.

While there will be no league of horseshoe pitchers here this season, the club will follow last year by selecting the best pitchers to play against those from Salineville, Sebring, Minerva, Carrollton, Alliance and Amherstburg.

All players will wear a uniform, consisting of a special sweater and cap to match. The new court here will be ready for play by Saturday next.

SPRINGFIELD, April 11.—An American cameraman found Juarez, Mexico, police obliging when he asked to get into jail to take pictures. The officers put him behind the bars for 15 days—without his camera.

And, don't forget, there are four other clubs to be figured in the race this year. Far from the least of these are the White Sox who, with Slugging Lou Poncia as the manager, may be a much-improved aggregation. They can't help out improve over the Chicago teams of past years but a lot depends on the showing of Al Simmons and Haas.

The Detroit Tigers strengthened their pitching staff by getting Fred Marberry and Carl Fischer from Washington but, besides a couple of youngsters, none of whom are likely to stick in the big show long, the team's lineup hasn't changed much. The St. Louis Browns are reinforced in several departments while the Boston Red Sox, practically a new ball club, are more or less an unknown quantity. Dale Alexander, Johnny Hodapp and Paul Andrews are the leading characters in the Boston team's show.

THE DAY IN SPORTS

ALTERATIONS IN Cage Code Listed; Adopt Statute On Center Tip-Off

Disregarding the fact that basketball will become a better game as soon as the rule-makers take a permanent vacation, the basketball fans will agree that not much harm has been done by their latest revisions.

Probably the most important change they have made is the one providing for elimination of the center tap in the second and fourth periods of games played in quarters. High school coaches, who are most interested in this change, have advocated it for many seasons.

Revise 3-Second Rule

One of the difficulties in changing rules, of course, is the fact that it is only through practice that the practicability of the changes can be demonstrated. Thus, it has been found desirable to revise the so-called three-second rule so that it applies to players receiving the ball in the free-throw area, regardless of position. This season, the rule applied to players with their backs to the basket—the centers of the pivot play which has come into wide usage.

A rule of interest to spectators makes it mandatory for officials to handle the ball on out-of-bound plays. By causing the ball to be placed on the floor, the official eliminates a common complaint of both players and spectators—the sometimes unfair advantage given by opportunity for a quick-action return.

BEER RULES SET BY COMMISSION

No Limit, Except Against Chain Stores, Fixed For Licenses

either by brewers or retailers, would be allowed only on week days. Thus, on Sundays beer drinkers must call at the stores themselves. There is no inhibition against carrying the beverage home.

In the case of chain stores, the number of permits will be limited to one for each 25,000 population or fraction thereof in any municipality, village or township. This regulation, said Judge Edward T. Dixon, of Cincinnati, chairman of the commission, was established to prevent unfair competition with small dealers.

No Other Restrictions

Otherwise, there will be no restriction on the number of permits or the locations of beer stores in any community, neither will there be any attempt to regulate prices. Judge Dixon expressing the hope that those interested in a fair administration of the law will see to it that exorbitant prices are not charged.

Reports that "political influence" had been used to obtain some beer permits, brought from the commission the statement that it "desires that it be distinctly understood that it is not necessary to secure the aid of any person claiming to have political or other influence in order to obtain a permit."

If the commission discovers any person making use of such influence to get a permit or paying any money to obtain a permit, such person in all probability will be denied a permit or if one has been received it may be revoked."

While the attorney general has made no formal ruling as to the status of municipalities still having ordinances prohibiting 3.2 beer, the commission said that permits would be granted in such communities if the applicant meets all state regulations. The attorney general is expected to rule later as to whether the state laws supersede local prohibition ordinances in such cases.

Another meeting will be held by the commission next Monday and further regulations will be announced then. In two weeks, Chairman Dixon said all permit holders would be subjected to rigid investigation to determine their eligibility to continue the sale of beer.

The commission named S. Wesley Fennig, of Celina, as secretary at a salary of $2,500 a year. Fennig has been secretary to Theodore Tanguan, secretary of commerce.
